

Course Name	Course Description	Course Number
(Master's course) Operations and supply chain management	This course aims to provide students with advanced topics on managing computer-based manufacturing processes, developing new products and services, and explaining the concept of operations and supply chain management and their importance.	202750
(Master's course) Advanced management information systems	This course aims to enable the student to make optimal use of management information systems in order to create competitive organizations and to manage institutions of a global character and in order to provide the best service and product to customers.	202230
(Master's course) Scientific Research Methodology	Scientific research methods and scientific research ethics, the general framework for scientific research and its quantitative and qualitative methodologies, feeling the problem and formulating hypotheses, collecting data, designing, coding and analyzing questionnaires statistically, building standard models such as measurement and testing hypotheses, conclusions and writing a report.	202730
(Master's course) ADVANCED FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT	The objective of this course is to give the student financial information in several fields, such as the concept of financial management, advanced financial analysis, capital markets, measurement of return and risk, valuation of stock and bond prices, financial structure, capital structure, capital budgets and profit distribution policies, and special topics financial management.	204765
(Master's course) International Marketing Management	This course aims to provide the student with academic, theoretical and intellectual knowledge and experiences on modern and varied topics about international marketing management and e-commerce from buying and selling through its various stages of development, which was reflected in economic institutions through international marketing practices, in order for the student to deal efficiently and effectively with reality and renewable requirements.	202740
(Master's course) Investment management and advanced financial markets		204760
(Master's course) International human resource management	The course enables the student to raise his level of knowledge in the field of international human resources management, teach him how to develop international human resources, detail the tasks and functions of international manpower management, labor relations and laws governing the management of manpower in public and private institutions and highlight the importance of international manpower from an international strategic perspective.	202720
(Master's course) International Business Strategies	The course aims to delve into the knowledge of the integrative trend in the application of international administrative strategies, the process of international strategic planning, types of international management strategies, implementation and evaluation of international management strategies and highlight the main conceptual perceptions in international strategic management, and the work environment of international internal and external organizations.	206725
International business		202790

ethics
(Master's course) Contemporary Issues in International Business Management	This course deals with more than one of the advanced business administration axes, including the following: culture, business ethics, social responsibility, total quality management, 6 sigma, benchmark, leadership, and governance.	204715
(Master's course) Change management	This course aims to examine the possible ways to develop business organizations, taking into consideration the association of these organizations with the institutions of the society in which they operate and other relevant dimensions, including globalization. The course also sheds light on business systems and patterns of major global cultures for their influential role in the transformation process. The course covers topics such as: Learning Management, Knowledge Creation and Creativity Management, Employee Empowerment Management, Cultural Transformation Management, and the Relation of Business Organizations to Sustainable Development. The course builds on global experiences that have achieved success in managing transformation and creativity at the level of business organizations.	202775
(Master's course) Organizational behavior	Organization change is an important component of society and the individual is considered the most important component of it and the study of organizational behavior that is concerned with the behavior of individuals and the behavior of groups within the design of the organization and what results from the presence of individuals within the organization as a social organization is considered one of the important factors for dealing with the individual and directing his behavior in increasing the effectiveness of the organization, which shows the importance of The topic and its necessity.	202775
(Master's course) Risk and crisis management	This course deals with the concept of risks and crises, their types, classification, and methods of dealing with them.	204745
(Master's course) ADVANCED MANAGERIAL ACCOUNTING	This course focuses on the main and advanced topics in Management Accounting with its modern strategic trends, and it's also identifying breakeven analysis and cost classification topics. Moreover, discuss exploiting financial statements and suitable costs to help management, as well as, introducing several issues related to: preparing planning, capital and decentralize budgets, responsibility accounting, methods of pricing products, time, cost and quality management. This is in addition to traditional and modern cost allocation methods and their impact on the departmental profitability analysis, the Balanced Scorecard and the concepts of value engineering and price transfer and reporting on them from the point of view of the management accountant.	202777
(Master's course) international organizations	The course deals with the study of the following issues: introducing international organizations, their origin and development, the legal personality of the international organization, and the implications of its recognition, and the study of the most important international organizations.	202780